

Pom Pom for Peace Tour August 2008

From the 25th – 31st August '08 we hope to organise a Pom Pom for Peace Tour in areas of cultural divide in Northern Ireland. It is our vision to do a one day stop in each county.

Organised by Pom Pom International and Neck of the Woods, we will be using very non political crafts and neutral portable dwellings (yurts) to carry out this tour. We are looking for any cultural, interface or similar organisations to assist us in sourcing a location for our pom pom yurt stop!

This will be a FREE event and we are seeking our own funding for this tour, we are not looking for any financial assistance at all from community organisations, we simply want to add value to the good work that you are already doing in your local neighbourhoods! But what we do need is to listen to your experiences of the local area, where we would be best placed to put our set up for the day and also some help to publicise this project in the local area through word of mouth. We would welcome to be involved in any summer activities you may have planned for the week.

TV Celebrity, comedienne, writer and broadcaster Amy Lamé is Director of Pom Pom International and will be joining us!

Pom Pom International (PPI) is a creative concept that aims to encourage peace and promote social understanding across the world through pom pom making. For further info please visit www.pompominternational.com

Pom Poms hold no political or cultural stigmas, and are easily made by anyone. Through the simple art of pom pom making, people of all ages and backgrounds are brought together. Pom poms are the unlikely yet ultimate symbol of social harmony for the 21st century.

If you want to know more about this or are interested in us coming to an area near you, please contact Natalie Irvine on 07922275827

